MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Put simply, this dispute belongs in arbitration. When she decided to create a Club Applebee’s account, Plaintiff Michelle Clark (“Plaintiff”) expressly agreed to Defendants Dine Brands Global, Inc.’s (“Dine Brands”), and Applebee’s Restaurants, LLC’s (collectively, “Defendants”) Terms of Use and valid and binding arbitration clause. In defiance of her agreement to arbitrate, Plaintiff filed this putative class action, alleging Defendants charged a fraudulent service fee to consumers placing delivery orders. See Class Action Complaint (“Compl.”). However, because Plaintiff affirmatively agreed to arbitrate her claims, and the arbitration clause is enforceable and encompasses her claims, this matter must be resolved exclusively through that process. Accordingly, Defendants respectfully request that the Court grant this motion and compel Plaintiff to arbitrate her claims in accordance with the clear and binding arbitration agreement to which she assented.

In the alternative, the Court should dismiss Plaintiff’s Complaint with prejudice. At its core, the allegations in this case amount to a simple question: whether Defendants properly disclosed an 11% service fee charged by a third-party delivery provider for delivery orders placed on the Applebee’s website and mobile ordering application. Plaintiff’s own allegations produce a simple answer: Defendants conspicuously disclosed the fee and the amount before the customer completed her purchase by displaying at checkout a line item titled “Service Fee,” along with an “i” button customers could press if they wanted to know the specific percentage (11%) of the service fee. Plaintiff expressly admits these facts in her Complaint. Despite this clear and conspicuous disclosure, Plaintiff alleges she and putative class members were misled into believing Defendants did not charge a service fee. Plaintiff’s own allegations bar such a theory.

First, Plaintiff has failed to adequately allege a claim under the California Consumers Legal Remedies Act, Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1750, et seq. (“CLRA”), the California False Advertising Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, et seq. (“FAL”), or the California Unfair Competition Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, et seq. (“UCL”). Under California law, a reasonable consumer is expected to act reasonably under the circumstances, and a reasonable consumer making a purchase

1 where a “Service Fee” is explicitly disclosed prior to payment would have no option but to see and 2 understand a defendant was charging a service fee. Moreover, because the alleged service fee was 3 plainly disclosed to consumers prior to payment, it allows consumers to decide whether to continue
4 with their purchase in light of the service fee.

5 Second, Plaintiff cannot succeed on her claim for fraudulent misrepresentation because she 6 cannot show any consumer—acting reasonably—would be misled by the “Service Fee,” and the 7 claim is not pled with particularity subject to Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 9(b). Finally, Plaintiff’s unjust
8 enrichment/quasi-contract claim is barred because unjust enrichment is not an independent tort in 9 California, and her quasi-contract claim is barred because Plaintiff cannot prove Defendants 10 retained a benefit through some sort of unjust expense upon her.

11 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND & SUMMARY OF ALLEGATIONS

12 Dine Brands is the ultimate parent company of the franchisor of the Applebee’s
13 Neighborhood Grill & Bar® branded restaurants. Declaration of Jason Suarez (“Suarez Decl.”), ¶ 1.
14 Plaintiff alleges that Defendants operate the online services offered on the Applebee’s website, 15 www.applebees.com. Compl. ¶ 1. Through this website, customers are offered the option of 16 placing takeout and/or delivery orders. Id., ¶ 4. Customers can also create a Club Applebee’s
17 account. Suarez Decl., ¶¶ 3-4. Most recently, on October 27, 2023, Plaintiff created a Club
18 Applebee’s account using the email address “michelleclark[###]@gmail.com,” which she 19 subsequently used to place delivery orders. Id., ¶ 5. The website page Plaintiff viewed when she

Id., ¶ 6.

As shown above, to create her account Plaintiff entered her contact and other personal information, and the address associated with Plaintiff's account is in San Leandro, CA, the same city she lists as her residence in the Complaint. Id. Plaintiff was then notified that "[b]y signing up [she] agree[d] to the Terms of Use" (the "Notice"). Id., ¶ 7. The Notice appeared in dark font, which contrasted with the webpage's white background. Id. The words "Terms of Use" appeared in red font and were hyperlinked to Defendants' Terms of Use (the "Terms").<sup>1</sup> Id., ¶ 8. If Plaintiff hovered her cursor over the hyperlink, the cursor would change to a hand pointer, the standard functionality for hyperlinks. Id. After being presented with the Notice, Plaintiff selected "Create Account" at the bottom of the page and thus, agreed to the Terms. Id., ¶ 9.

The very Terms Plaintiff agreed to expressly state that they constitute a binding legal agreement between Plaintiff and "Dine Brands Global, Inc., and its subsidiaries and affiliates (collectively, 'Dine Brands,' 'us,' 'our,' and 'we') governing [Plaintiff's] access to and use of the websites and online services that Dine Brands operates and that link to these Terms (collectively, the 'Site' or 'Sites')." <sup>2</sup> Terms, § 1.1. The beginning of the Terms also notified Plaintiff they

<sup>2</sup> The Terms and the valid and binding arbitration clause contained therein are applicable to both

1 contained “A BINDING ARBITRATION CLAUSE AND CLASS ACTION WAIVER THAT
 2 AFFECT YOUR RIGHTS FOR RESOLVING ANY DISPUTE WITH US (SECTION 13).”

3 Id., § 1.2.

4 The referenced Section 13 contained the arbitration clause (the “Arbitration Clause”), which 5 stated as follows:

6 Binding Arbitration. If you and Dine Brands do not resolve any 7 dispute by informal negotiation or in small claims court, any other
 8 effort to resolve the dispute will be conducted exclusively by 9 individual confidential binding arbitration governed by the Federal 10 Arbitration Act (“FAA”). Class arbitrations are not permitted. You 11 are giving up the right to litigate disputes in court before a judge or 12 jury (or participate in court as a party or class member). Instead, all 13 disputes will be resolved before a neutral arbitrator, whose decision
 14 will be final except for a limited right of appeal under the FAA. You 15 will have a reasonable opportunity to participate in the process of 16 choosing an arbitrator. Any court with jurisdiction over the parties
 17 may enforce the arbitrator’s award.

18 Id., § 13.3. “Dispute” is defined as

19 any dispute, action, or other controversy between you and 20 [Defendants] arising out of or in connection with these Terms
 21 (including without limitation our Privacy Policy) and/or your use of 22 the Site, whether in contract, warranty, tort, statute, regulation,
 23 ordinance, or any other legal or equitable basis.

24 Id., § 13 (emphasis added). Further, under the Terms, “dispute” is to be given “the broadest possible 25 meaning allowable under law.” Id.

26 The Terms also include a class-action waiver, providing:

27 Any proceedings to resolve or litigate any dispute in any forum will be 28 conducted solely on an individual basis. Neither you nor Dine Brands will seek to have any dispute heard as a class action, Private Attorneys General Act action, or in any other proceeding in which either party acts or proposes to act in a representative capacity. No arbitration or other proceeding will be combined with another without the prior written consent of all parties to all affected arbitrations or proceedings.

29 Id., § 13.4.

30 The Terms provide that an arbitration may be commenced with Judicial Arbitration and Arbitration Minimum Standards, before a single arbitrator in Plaintiff’s county of residence or Los Angeles, County. Id., § 13.5. For an arbitration commenced by Plaintiff, “the only fee required to be paid is an initial case management fee which is approximately equivalent to current court filing fees.” Id., § 13.6. “All other costs will be borne by [Defendants].” Id. The Terms further provide that, notwithstanding the agreement to arbitrate, Plaintiff may alternatively bring actions in small claims court. Id., § 13.7.

Despite Plaintiff’s assent to the Terms, including the Arbitration Clause, Plaintiff filed this lawsuit on August 1, 2024. See Compl. Plaintiff asserts claims for violation of California’s Consumers Legal Remedies Act, False Advertising Law, Unfair Competition Law and fraudulent misrepresentation and unjust enrichment based on her assertion that Defendants charged online consumers a fraudulent service fee.<sup>3</sup> Id.

III. LEGAL STANDARD

The Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”), which governs arbitration agreements such as the one here, provides that arbitration clauses “shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract[.]” 9 U.S.C. § 2. The FAA “leaves no place for the exercise of discretion by a district court, but instead mandates [] district courts shall direct the parties to proceed to arbitration on issues as to which an arbitration agreement has been signed.” Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Byrd, 470 U.S. 213, 218 (1985) (emphasis in original).

In determining whether to grant a motion to compel arbitration, courts “must determine two gateway issues: (1) whether there is an agreement to arbitrate between the parties; and (2) whether Spizzirri*, 601 U.S. 472, 478 (2024).

IV. ARGUMENT

A. Plaintiff Agreed to and is Bound by the Terms, Including the Arbitration Clause.

By creating a Club Applebee’s account, Plaintiff affirmatively agreed to arbitrate her claims. To determine whether an agreement to arbitrate has been reached, federal courts “appl[y] ordinary state-law principles that govern contract formation.” Moyer v. Chegg, Inc., No. 22-cv-09123-JSW, 2023 WL 4771181, at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 25, 2023). To form a contract under California law, “there must be actual or constructive notice of the agreement and the parties must manifest mutual assent.” Id. (quotations omitted).<sup>4</sup>

The manner in which Plaintiff was presented the Terms is referred to as a “modified clickwrap agreement” or “sign-in wrap agreement,” which means Plaintiff was “notified of the existence of the website’s terms of use and advise[d] [] that by making some type of affirmative act ... she [] agree[d] to the terms of service.” Id. These types of agreements are enforceable where “(1) the website provides reasonably conspicuous notice of the terms to which the consumer will be bound; and (2) the consumer takes some action, such as clicking a button or checking a box, that unambiguously manifests his or her assent to those terms.” Keebaugh v. Warner Bros. Ent. Inc., 100 F.4th 1005, 1014 (9th Cir. 2024) (quotations omitted). In weighing the conspicuousness of a notice, the Court must also consider “the full context of the transaction” because it is “critical to determining whether a given textual notice is sufficient to put an internet consumer on inquiry

<sup>4</sup> Given Plaintiff’s numerous claims under California law, it is Defendants’ understanding that Plaintiff does not dispute the application of California law. Regardless, under any conceivable choice-of-law analysis, California law must apply because it is the law of the forum and the Terms require application of California law. Terms, § 14.2.

notice of contractual terms.” Chabolla v. ClassPass Inc., No. 4:23-cv-00429-YGR, 2023 WL 4544598, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 22, 2023) (quoting Sellers v. JustAnswer LLC, 73 Cal. App. 5th 444, 453 (2021)) (emphasis in original).

1. Defendants Provided Reasonably Conspicuous Notice of the Terms.

The organization of the Applebee’s website and design elements provided Plaintiff with reasonably conspicuous notice of the Terms. To be reasonably conspicuous, “a notice must be displayed in a font size and format such that the court can fairly assume that a reasonably prudent Internet user would have seen it.” Oberstein v. Live Nation Ent., Inc., 60 F.4th 505, 515 (9th Cir. 2023). To resolve this question, courts consider “1) the size of the text; 2) the color of the text as compared to the background it appears against; 3) the location of the text and, specifically, its proximity to any box or button the user must click to continue use of the website; 4) the obviousness of any associated hyperlink; and 5) whether other elements on the screen clutter or otherwise obscure the textual notice.” Chabolla, 2023 WL 4544598 at *4 (quoting Sellers, 73 Cal. App. 5th at 473).

Here, the Notice appears in standard size with legible, dark font. It contrasts clearly with the webpage’s white background. The Notice is located immediately above the large, red “Create Account” button, all of which is separated from the rest of the page by a perforated line. This design draws attention to and emphasizes the Notice and effect of creating an account. Within the Notice, the phrase “Terms of Use” are presented in red font, making the existence of a hyperlink obvious to Plaintiff. Additionally, if Plaintiff hovered her cursor over the hyperlink, a hand pointer would appear, further emphasizing the existence of a hyperlink. Finally, the webpage is uncluttered and presents a simple and easy flow, culminating with presentation of the Notice immediately before Plaintiff decided to create an account.

Courts consistently find almost identical notices to be reasonably conspicuous. See Oberstein, 60 F.4th at 516 (finding reasonably conspicuous notice where various notices were “displayed directly above or below the action button” and the terms of use hyperlink was “conspicuously distinguished from the surrounding text in bright blue font, making its presence readily apparent”); Karim v. Best Buy Co., No. 22-cv-04909-JST, 2023 WL 3801909, at *3 (N.D.

Cal. June 2, 2023) (finding reasonably conspicuous notice, despite plaintiff’s characterization of the notice’s font as “grey undifferentiated print,” because the notice’s “dark text contrast[ed] clearly with the white background” and the hyperlink containing the terms of use was “in blue with no other emphasis”); Hooper v. Jerry Ins. Agency, LLC, 675 F. Supp. 3d 1027, 1035-36 (N.D. Cal. 2023) (finding reasonably conspicuous notice where the notice’s “dark grey text contrast[ed] clearly with the white background,” it was “displayed directly ... below the action button,” the webpage was “uncluttered and wholly visible,” and the hyperlink appeared in “bright pink font, in contrast to the surrounding gray font”); Peter v. DoorDash, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 3d 580, 586-87 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (finding reasonably conspicuous notice, despite plaintiff’s characterization of a notice as “gray-on-gray” because the “text contrast[ed] clearly with the background and [was] plainly readable[,]” the notice appeared close to the sign-up button, the screen was “uncluttered and wholly visible,” and the hyperlinks were “both in blue, indicating to users that they are clickable”).

In contrast, the limited cases finding a notice to be inconspicuous are readily distinguishable. For example, in Chabolla, this Court held various notices to be inconspicuous where (i) they appeared in a “faint, light grey font”; (ii) “the surrounding text [was] not only larger but also far darker”; (iii) the notice did not appear directly above or below the “Continue” button, “which render[ed] the visual connection between the notice and ‘Continue’ button less clear”; and (iv) the “textual and organizational design choices ... de-emphasize[d] references to the Terms and Privacy Policy, rendering them inconspicuous.” 2023 WL 4544598 at *4 (emphasis in original). Similarly, in Berman v. Freedom Fin. Network, LLC, which this Court relied on in Chabolla, the notice was “printed in a tiny gray font considerably smaller than the font used in the surrounding website elements,” “the comparatively larger font used in all of the surrounding text naturally direct[ed] the user’s attention everywhere else,” and the notice was “deemphasized by the overall design of the webpage, in which other visual elements draw the user’s attention away from the barely readable critical text.” 30 F.4th 849, 856-57 (9th Cir. 2022).

Under well-established precedent, it is clear Plaintiff received reasonably conspicuous notice of the Terms, which included the Arbitration Clause.

1                                   2. The Context of the Transaction Confirms Plaintiff was on Notice of the 2                                   Terms.

3           Plaintiff’s creation of a Club Applebee’s account contemplated a forward-looking
 4 relationship, which naturally required terms and conditions between the parties, such that Plaintiff
 5 was on notice of the Terms. “[T]he majority of the federal cases finding an enforceable sign-in 6 wrap agreement involve continuing, forward-looking relationships.” Sellers, 73 Cal. App. 5th
 7 at 476. This is because “the transactional context is an important factor to consider and is key to 8 determining the expectations of the typical consumer.” Keebaugh, 100 F.4th at 1019.

9           Plaintiff’s account “registration process[] reflected the contemplation of some sort of 10 continuing relationship” that put her “on notice for a link to the terms of that continuing 11 relationship.” Oberstein, 60 F.4th at 517 (quotations omitted); see also Sellers, 73 Cal. App. 5th at 12 476-77 (discussing Meyer v. Uber Techs., Inc., 868 F.3d 66, 80 (2d Cir. 2017), where the plaintiff 13 signed up for an Uber account and therefore, under California law, “contemplated some sort of 14 continuing relationship [with] Uber ... that would require some terms and conditions”).
 15 Accordingly, the context of this transaction leaves no doubt Plaintiff was on notice of the 16 Arbitration Clause.

17                                   3. Plaintiff Unambiguously Assented to the Terms.

18           Plaintiff unambiguously assented to the Terms, including the Arbitration Clause, by 19 selecting “Create Account.” “A user’s click of a button can be construed as an unambiguous 20 manifestation of assent only if the user is explicitly advised that the act of clicking will constitute 21 assent to the terms and conditions of an agreement.” Berman, 30 F.4th at 857. “All that is required
 22 is that the text of the notice explicitly alert the user that by proceeding to the next page, the user
 23 agrees to our Terms of Use.” Kaplan v. Athletic Media Co., 705 F. Supp. 3d 992, 1002 (N.D. Cal.
 24 2023) (punctuation and citation omitted).

25           The Notice, which appeared immediately above the “Create Account” button, explained to 26 Plaintiff that “[b]y signing up [she] agree[d] to the Terms of Use.” Suarez Decl., ¶ 7. The language
 27 and organization of the page made clear that by selecting “Create Account,” Plaintiff agreed to the 28 Terms, including the Arbitration Clause. This Court has consistently found similarly worded and

1 designed notices to evidence a user’s manifestation of assent. Ghazizadeh v. Coursera, Inc.,
 2 No. 23-cv-05646-EJD, 2024 WL 3455255, at *11 (N.D. Cal. June 20, 2024) (holding a user
 3 assented where the notice stated “By creating an account, I accept Coursera’s Terms of Service and 4 Honor Code” and the assent manifesting action, clicking the “Sign Up” button, was made clear by 5 the location of the button directly above the notice); Regan v. Pinger, Inc., No. 20-CV-02221-LHK, 6 2021 WL 706465, at *7-8 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 23, 2021) (finding assent where the notice appeared
 7 immediately above the “Create Account” button and stated “By registering, I agree to Sideline’s
 8 Terms and Condition”). Further, despite the “technical mismatch in language, ‘the physical 9 proximity of the notice to the register button and the placement of the language in the registration
 10 flow ma[d]e clear to [Plaintiff] that the linked terms pertain[ed] to the action [she was] about to 11 take.’” Lee v. DoNotPay, Inc., 683 F. Supp. 3d 1062, 1075 (C.D. Cal. 2023) (citing Meyer, 868 12 F.3d at 80).

13 In short, when she selected “Create Account” immediately after she was notified her 14 creation of an account constituted her assent to the Terms, Plaintiff agreed to the Terms—and the 15 Arbitration Clause.

16 B. The Arbitration Clause Covers this Dispute.

17 The broad scope of the Arbitration Clause unquestionably encompasses this dispute. In 18 determining the scope of an arbitration clause, “courts have recognized the distinction between 19 ‘broad’ and ‘narrow’ language.” Concat LP v. Unilever, PLC, 350 F. Supp. 2d 796, 807 (N.D. Cal.
 20 2004). Where an arbitration clause covers “all disputes arising out of or in connection” with an 21 agreement, its scope is broad. Id. When this type of language is employed, the arbitration 22 agreement “reaches every dispute between the parties having a significant relationship to the 23 contract and all disputes having their origin or genesis in the contract.” Optimum Prods. v. Home
 24 Box Off., 839 F. App’x. 75, 77 (9th Cir. 2020) (quotations and citation omitted) (stating “factual 25 allegations need only touch matters covered by the contract”).

26 The Terms begin by explaining they govern “access to and use of the websites and online
 27 services that [Defendants] operate[] and that link to the[] Terms (collectively, the ‘Site’ or ‘Sites’).”
 28 Terms, § 1.1. The Arbitration Clause requires all disputes, defined as “any dispute, action, or other

DENTONS US LLP

controversy between you and [Defendants] arising out of or in connection with these Terms and/or your use of the Site,” be resolved by confidential, binding arbitration. Id., §§ 13, 13.3 (emphasis added). In addition to employing broad language, the Arbitration Clause reiterates the term “dispute” is to “be given the broadest possible meaning allowable under law.” Id., § 13. Here, each of Plaintiff’s claims centers on the assertion Defendants wrongfully charged a “carefully concealed 11 percent ‘Service Fee’” to customers placing online orders through Defendants’ website and application. Compl., ¶ 6. As a result, this dispute plainly arises out of and is in connection with Plaintiff’s use of the Applebee’s Site. Further, because Plaintiff’s use of the Site, and the services offered therein, are governed by the Terms, her claims also arise out of and in connection with the Terms.

Simply put, given the broad language of the Arbitration Clause and the fact Plaintiff’s claims emanate from her use of Defendants’ online services, which are governed by the Terms, this dispute is certainly one “arising out of or in connection with [the] Terms and/or [Plaintiff’s] use of the Site.” Terms, § 13.

C. The Arbitration Clause is Valid and Enforceable.

There is no basis to invalidate the Arbitration Clause because any “unconscionability” argument is without merit. Under any unconscionability challenge, Plaintiff bears the burden to demonstrate the clause “is both procedurally and substantively unconscionable.” Poublon v. C.H. Robinson Co., 846 F.3d 1251, 1260 (9th Cir. 2017). In determining unconscionability, courts employ a “sliding scale” where “the more substantively oppressive the contract term, the less evidence of procedural unconscionability is required to come to the conclusion that the term is unenforceable, and vice versa.” Id. (internal citation and quotation omitted).

1. The Arbitration Clause is Not Procedurally Unconscionable.

The Arbitration Clause is not procedurally unconscionable because there is no “oppression or surprise due to unequal bargaining power.” Lim v. TForce Logistics, LLC, 8 F.4th 992, 1000 (9th Cir. 2021). “Oppression occurs where a contract involves lack of negotiation and meaningful choice, [and] surprise [occurs] where the allegedly unconscionable provision is hidden within a ... form.” Kaplan, 705 F. Supp. 3d at 1004. Factors indicating procedural unconscionability include:

(1) the amount of time the party is given to consider the proposed contract; (2) the amount and type of pressure exerted on the party to sign the proposed contract; (3) the length of the proposed contract and the length and complexity of the challenged provision; (4) the education and experience of the party; and (5) whether the party's review of the proposed contract was aided by an attorney.

Id. at 1005.

In this case, none of these factors indicate procedural unconscionability. When Plaintiff chose to create a Club Applebee's account, the Terms were provided in a hyperlink, which directed her to a separate webpage and gave her unlimited time to review the Terms, including the Arbitration Clause. Further, Plaintiff was not required or pressured into accepting the Terms. Plaintiff decided, on her own volition, to create an account. By no stretch of the imagination did Defendants pressure Plaintiff to accept the Terms. Moreover, the Terms, which are relatively short, notified Plaintiff on the first page that they contain "A BINDING ARBITRATION CLAUSE AND CLASS ACTION WAIVER THAT AFFECT [HER] RIGHTS FOR RESOLVING DISPUTES WITH US (SECTION 13)." Terms, § 1.2. The referenced section 13 contained the full arbitration agreement, which is not lengthy, is free of legalese and is easy to understand. Additionally, given Plaintiff's ability to register for a Club Applebee's account, she certainly had the capacity to review and understand the Arbitration Clause. Finally, although at this stage it is unclear whether Plaintiff consulted an attorney in her review of the Terms, she was free to do so if she pleased. In light of the foregoing, Plaintiff cannot not demonstrate oppression or surprise.

Further, despite the adhesive nature of the contract, because "there is no other indication of oppression or surprise, the degree of procedural unconscionability ... is low, and the agreement will be enforceable unless the degree of substantive unconscionability is high." Loewen v. Lyft, Inc., 129 F. Supp. 3d 945, 956 (N.D. Cal. 2015) (quotations and citation omitted); Cornejo v. Spenger's Fresh Fish Grotto, No. C 09-05564 MHP, 2010 WL 1980236, at *6 (N.D. Cal. May 17, 2010) (noting adhesion contracts are an "inevitable fact of life for all citizens" and "other factors need to be present to render an adhesion contract unenforceable") (quotation and citation omitted).

2. The Arbitration Clause is Not Substantively Unconscionable.

The Arbitration Clause is not substantively unconscionable because it is more favorable to

DENTONS US LLP
601 SOUTH FIGUEROA STREET, SUITE 2500
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA 90017-5704
213 623 9300

Plaintiff. To be substantively unconscionable, the Terms must be “overly harsh, unduly oppressive, unreasonably favorable or must shock the conscience.” Poublon, 846 F.3d at 1261 (quotations omitted). Substantive unconscionability is “concerned not with a simple old-fashioned bad bargain but with terms that are unreasonably favorable to the more powerful party.” Id. It is not the case that “a one-sided contract is [] necessarily unconscionable,” unconscionability requires “something more than the absence of mutuality.” Davenport v. Nvidia Corp., No. 23-cv-01877-PCP, 2024 WL 832387, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 28, 2024) (quotation and citation omitted) (holding a lack of mutuality combined with a pre-arbitration dispute resolution process was insufficient to render the arbitration provision unenforceable).<sup>5</sup>

Under the Terms, both Plaintiff and Defendants are required to arbitrate their claims. Terms, § 13.3. Arbitration is to be conducted by JAMS, a highly regarded arbitration administrator, under its rules, including its Consumer Arbitration Minimum Standards, in Plaintiff’s county of residence or Los Angeles, County. Id., § 13.5. Importantly, the Arbitration Clause preserves Plaintiff’s right to bring actions in small-claims court, providing an accessible alternative to arbitration for smaller disputes. Id., § 13.2. Further, the only fee to be paid by Plaintiff is a “case management fee which is approximately equivalent to current court filing fees.” Id., § 13.6. All other arbitration costs are borne by Defendants. Id. Given that this Court has rejected a substantive unconscionability challenge to an arbitration clause that split fees, there is no question the Arbitration Clause is exceedingly fair and, therefore, is not substantively unconscionable. Lag Shot LLC v. Facebook, Inc., No. 21-cv-01495-JST, 2021 WL 2660433, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 25, 2021).

For these reasons, the Arbitration Clause should not be rendered unenforceable based on any unconscionability argument advanced by Plaintiff.

D. Arbitration May not Proceed on a Class-Wide Basis.

Although the issue is for the arbitrator rather than this Court, the Terms contain an unambiguous waiver of any right to proceed as a class action or consolidate claims of more than one person. Terms, § 13.4. Consistent with Supreme Court precedent, if this issue were to reach the Court (which it should not), the class-action waiver should be upheld and enforced. See, e.g., AT&T Mobility LLC, 563 U.S. at 352 (holding the FAA preempted California judicial rule which required the availability of class-wide arbitration); Epic Sys. Corp. v. Lewis, 584 U.S. 497 (2018).

<sup>5</sup> Under well-established precedent, the Terms’ class waiver is also not substantively unconscionable. Carter v. Rent-A-Ctr., Inc., 718 F. App’x 502, 504 (9th Cir. 2017) (noting AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333 (2011), discussed below, foreclosed “any argument that a class action waiver, by itself, is unconscionable.”).

V. ALTERNATIVELY, THIS CASE SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6)

A. Legal Standard for Dismissal Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

A motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) “tests the legal sufficiency of a claim.” Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 729, 732 (9th Cir. 2001). A complaint “must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). A “threadbare” recitation of the elements of a cause of action does not suffice. Id. Neither do conclusory allegations or allegations that “merely track[] the language of the statute[s] [themselves], without providing facts to substantiate the claimed legal conclusions.” Ticketmaster L.L.C. v. Prestige Ent. W., Inc., 315 F. Supp. 3d 1147, 1175 (C.D. Cal. 2018); see also In re Gilead Scis. Sec. Litig., 536 F.3d 1049, 1055 (9th Cir. 2008) (courts should not “accept as true allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or unreasonable inferences”). To survive dismissal, Plaintiff must plead sufficient factual content that allows the Court to “draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678.

In conducting its analysis, the Court is not to assume “the [plaintiff] can prove facts that [she] has not alleged.” Associated Gen. Contractors of California v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 526 (1983). Moreover, “[t]he court need not . . . accept as true allegations that contradict matters properly subject to judicial notice or by exhibit.” Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors, 266 F.3d 979, 988 (9th Cir. 2001). “Nor is the court required to accept as true allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or unreasonable inferences.” Id. Ultimately, the factual allegations that can be considered “must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007).

B. Plaintiff Fails to Plausibly Allege a Reasonable Consumer Would be Misled by the Service Fee.

Plaintiff asserts claims under three separate but closely related California statutes: the UCL, FAL, and CLRA. The CLRA prohibits “unfair or deceptive acts or practices.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770. Similarly, the UCL prohibits “untrue or misleading” statements (Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200), and the FAL prohibits “untrue or misleading” advertisements. Id. § 17500. Although the statutes differ slightly, violations of the CLRA, UCL and FAL are all analyzed under the same reasonable-consumer test, which requires a plaintiff to show “members of the public are likely to be deceived” by a defendant’s activity. Williams v. Gerber Prod. Co., 552 F.3d 934, 938 (9th Cir. 2008) (internal citation omitted). The touchstone under this test is “whether the product labeling and ads promoting the products have a meaningful capacity to deceive consumers.” McGinity v. Procter & Gamble Co., 69 F.4th 1093, 1097 (9th Cir. 2023). The reasonable-consumer test requires more than a “mere possibility” that advertising “might conceivably be misunderstood by some few consumers viewing it in an unreasonable manner.” Ebner v. Fresh, Inc., 838 F.3d 958, 965 (9th Cir. 2016) (quoting Lavie v. Procter & Gamble Co., 105 Cal. App. 4th 496, 508 (2003)). Rather, as the Ninth Circuit explained, the reasonable-consumer test requires a probability “that a significant portion of the general consuming public or of targeted consumers, acting reasonably in the circumstances, could be misled.” Id. (citation omitted) (emphasis added).

Plaintiff’s claim that a reasonable consumer would be misled or deceived as to the imposition of the service fee is not plausible. As Plaintiff alleges, it is undisputed Defendants disclosed the service fee before Plaintiff—or any other customers—completed their purchases. Compl., ¶ 25 and Figure 2. As clearly shown, the imposition of the “Service Fee” is not just disclosed, but customers can see the percentage it represented. Indeed, everything the customer needed to know to understand what they were being charged for the food product, taxes and fees was readily accessible and prominently displayed at the checkout screen—and the “Service Fee” is clearly separated and delineated from all other fees and taxes. Compl., ¶ Figure 2. In other words, customers had full knowledge and disclosure of the 11% service fee before deciding to complete (or not complete) their purchase. A reasonable consumer cannot be misled by the addition of a

6 of the actual price it would charge its customers for declared value coverage prior to any purchase,

9 Wyndham Int’l, Inc., 102 Cal. App. 4th 1327, 1334 (2002) (affirming dismissal of UCL and FAL

11 had “the freedom to decline the service”); see also Dimond v. Darden Rests., Inc., No. 13 Civ.
12 5244(KPF), 2014 WL 3377105, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. July 9, 2014) (plaintiff could not state a claim for

15 expressly informed as to the cost of dining at the Restaurant prior to voluntarily placing his or her 16 order”).

17 Further, while Plaintiff repeatedly alleges she did not know what “‘services’ the Service
18 Fee is intended to cover” (Compl. ¶ 28) and was “left unaware exactly what the additional charge
19 is for,” (id.) Defendants have no obligation to provide that information. Just as the hotel in Searle
20 had “no obligation to advise consumers about what it does with the revenue it receives from them”
21 (Searle, 102 Cal. App. 4th at 1335), Defendants have no obligation to explain to consumers what 22 is done with the service fee. Id. at 1334 (“What a hotel does with the revenue it earns—from either 23 the mini-bar, in-room movies or its room service charges—is of no direct concern to hotel guests.”);
24 see also Quezada v. Franklin Madison Grp., LLC, No. 19cv2153-LAB (DEB), 2020 WL 5819824, 25 at *5 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2020) (“As long as the actual price is disclosed and plaintiffs agreed to 26 pay for it, failure to disclose the basis or nature of the markups is not actionable under California’s
27 UCL in this case. What a seller chooses to do with the markup included in the prices buyers pay is 28 of no legitimate concern to the buyers.”) (internal citations omitted). And Defendants have not made “any representations regarding the nature of the Service Fee that can be construed as misrepresentations.” Watson v. Crumbl LLC, No. 2:23-cv-01770-DJC-CKD, 2024 WL 3010880, at *8 (E.D. Cal. June 10, 2024).

In sum, Plaintiff fails to plausibly allege the service fee was likely to mislead a significant portion of the reasonable consuming public because the service fee was adequately and fully disclosed before any customer completed their purchase. As Plaintiff’s own allegations confirm, she and other customers were armed with information to (1) understand a service fee was being charged, (2) determine the precise amount of the fee by pressing the description box directly next to the service fee at checkout, and (3) avoid any misrepresentations about the nature of the service fee. Thus, Plaintiff’s CLRA (Count 1), FAL (Count 2), and UCL (Count 3) claims fail.

C. Plaintiff Fails to Otherwise State a Claim Under The CLRA.

The CLRA prohibits “unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices” involved in “the sale or lease of goods or services to any consumer.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a). Plaintiff’s CLRA claim rests entirely on the unfounded notion Defendants have violated Sections 1770(a)(9) and (a)(20) of the CLRA, because, as alleged, the price of the food products on Defendants’ website and application included an 11% service fee at checkout. Compl., ¶ 63. Specifically, Plaintiff claims the Applebee’s menu and service fee violate Section 1770(a)(9) and (a)(20) because the service fee is separated from the advertised prices offered for food and drinks on the menu itself. Compl., ¶ 62. Plaintiff has failed to state a claim under either section.

First, Plaintiff’s Section 1770(a)(9) fails under the plain language of the statute. Section 1770(a)(9) prohibits “[a]dvertising goods or services with intent not to sell them as advertised.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a)(9). Here, as alleged, Defendants intended to sell the food products and separate delivery services exactly as advertised, with prices listed for each food item, and a clearly separate service fee determined by a fixed percentage of the customer’s total order. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1761 (CLRA defines “goods and “services” separately, with “services” including “services furnished in connection with the sale or repair of goods.”). Plaintiff was told all of this.

Plaintiff’s Section 1770(a)(20) claim also fails. Section 1770(a)(20) prohibits

1 “[a]dvertising that a product is being offered at a specific price plus a specific percentage of that 2 price.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a)(20). Even assuming arguendo that the menu is an
3 “advertisement” (which California courts have held they are not)<sup>6</sup>, Plaintiff’s attempt to bring the 4 service fee within the scope of the Section 1770(a)(20) fails because the service fee is not an 5 addition to the price of the alleged “product” (i.e., the individual food or beverage item), as the 6 statute prohibits. Rather, Plaintiff takes issue with a “Service Fee” charged by a third-party delivery
7 provider. Section 1770(a)(20) prevents retailers from double-pricing individual products; it cannot 8 be read to encompass separate charges attributable to the provision of ancillary services. Indeed, 9 listing a fee separate from food and beverage prices allows customers the opportunity to fully 10 understand exactly what they are paying for.

11 D. Plaintiff’s Fraudulent Misrepresentation Claim Fails as a Matter of Law.

12 Rule 9(b) requires a complaint in an action based on misrepresentation to allege all the 13 substantive elements of the fraud. “The elements of a cause of action for fraud in California are:
14 ‘(a) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) knowledge of 15 falsity (or ‘scienter’); (c) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) justifiable reliance; and 16 (e) resulting damage.’” Kearns v. Ford Motor Co., 567 F.3d 1120, 1126 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting 17 Engalla v. Permanente Med. Grp., Inc., 15 Cal. 4th 951, 974 (1997)).

18 Plaintiff alleges the advertising and listing of prices on the Applebee’s website and 19 application are false, misleading and likely to deceive reasonable consumers because the prices fail
20 to include the 11% service fee. See Compl. generally. However, these allegations are belied by 21 other allegations in the Complaint, including screenshots displaying the payment screen of the 22 Applebee’s website, which clearly demonstrates each customer sees pre-purchase that the menu
23 price makes up the Subtotal and that additional taxes and fees, including a separate and distinct line

24 <sup>6</sup> See Holt v. Noble House Hotels & Resort, Ltd, 370 F. Supp. 3d 1158, 1166 (S.D. Cal. 2019)
25 (“Here, the CLRA does not define ‘advertising.’ See Cal. Civ. Code § 1761. However,
26 § 1770(a)(20) provides some guidance, explaining that advertisements include, but are not limited
27 to, ‘shelf tags, displays, and media advertising.’ Cal. Civ. Code § 1770(a)(20). California Civil 28 Code § 1755 explains that media advertising ‘includ[es], but [is] not limited to, newspapers, magazines, broadcast stations, billboards and transit ads[.]’ Cal. Civ. Code § 1755. Restaurant menus do not fit well within this statutory language. Menus are lists of dishes or offerings that may be ordered at a restaurant, not tags, displays, or ads one would find in a magazine or on billboards.”)

item for the “Service Fee,” are added along with any “Tip” amount to make up the “Total.” Id. at Figure 2. There are no false misrepresentations or knowledge of falsity alleged—nor can there be—because the Complaint clearly shows the payment screen conspicuously displayed the total price, including the service fee, before any purchase could be completed. Id.

Plaintiff also fails to adequately plead justified reliance. To do so, Plaintiff must show (1) actual reliance, i.e., “the matter was material in the sense that a reasonable person would find it important in determining how he or she would act;” and (2) reasonable reliance, i.e., “it was reasonable for the plaintiff to have relied on the misrepresentation.” Hoffman v. 162 North Wolfe LLC, 228 Cal. App. 4th 1178, 1194 (2014). “[A] plaintiff’s particular knowledge and experience should be considered in determining whether the reliance upon the misrepresentation or nondisclosure was justified.” Id. “If the conduct of the plaintiff in the light of his own intelligence and information was manifestly unreasonable ... he will be denied a recovery.” Id. (quoting Seeger v. Odell, 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414 (1941)). Here, any consumers who ordered any food product for delivery on the Applebee’s website were shown the addition of the 11% service fee prior to paying for their delivery order. It would be unreasonable for consumers to fail to review the breakdown of their order prior to completing their purchase. Thus, Plaintiff cannot establish reliance and cannot maintain a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation.

E. Plaintiff Fails to Allege the Required Elements to Assert a Claim for Unjust Enrichment/Quasi-Contract.

Count Five of Plaintiff’s Complaint is styled as a claim for “Unjust Enrichment/Quasi-Contract.” See Compl. at Count V. In California, unjust enrichment occurs when a person obtains a benefit he or she may not justly retain because the benefit was received at another’s expense. Unilab Corp. v. Angeles-IPA, 244 Cal. App. 4th 622, 639 (2016) (“Where a person obtains a benefit that he or she may not justly retain, the person is unjustly enriched.”). California courts have consistently held that “[t]here is no cause of action in California for unjust enrichment.” Walker v. USAA Cas. Ins. Co., 474 F. Supp. 2d 1168, 1174 (E.D. Cal. 2007) (quotation and citation omitted); City of Oakland v. Oakland Raiders, 83 Cal. App. 5th 458, 477 (2022) (citation omitted) (“There is no cause of action in California labeled ‘unjust enrichment.’”); Ham v. Hain Celestial Grp., Inc.,

DENTONS US LLP

213 623 9300

70 F. Supp. 3d 1188, 1191 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (“[U]njust enrichment claim is dismissed because unjust enrichment is not an independent cause of action.”). Instead, unjust enrichment is a “general principle, underlying various legal doctrines and remedies,” rather than a remedy itself. Dinosaur Dev., Inc. v. White, 216 Cal. App. 3d 1310, 1315 (1989) (citation and quotation omitted). Because California law does not recognize Plaintiff’s claim for unjust enrichment, there are no facts Plaintiff could allege to support this claim, and it should be dismissed with prejudice.

Plaintiff’s claim for “quasi-contract” is also unsuccessful here. A claim for quasi-contract must adequately allege the “receipt of a benefit and [the] unjust retention of the benefit at the expense of another.” Peterson v. Cellco P’ship, 164 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1593 (2008) (citation and quotation omitted). Here, Plaintiff received the benefit of the bargain—the Applebee’s food items she wished to purchase, and did purchase. Comet Theatre Enters., Inc. v. Cartwright, 195 F.2d 80, 83 (9th Cir. 1952) (“There is no equitable reason for invoking restitution when the plaintiff gets the exchange which he expected.”). Plaintiff’s own allegations demonstrate she was on notice of the service fee before placing an order. See, e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 25, 26 (“On the final page prior to payment when placing an online delivery order, customers are shown a cost breakdown of their charges” and “[a] small line of text described as ‘Service Fee’ appears”). As such, she cannot prove Defendants retained a benefit through some sort of unjust expense upon her.

F. Plaintiff’s Complaint Lacks the Specificity Required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

Claims such as those here, which “sound in fraud,” are subject to the further heightened pleading requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). See Williams v. Apple, Inc., 449 F. Supp. 3d 892, 901 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (citing Bly-Magee v. California, 236 F.3d 1014, 1018 (9th Cir. 2001)); PETA v. Whole Foods Mkt. California, Inc., No. 15-cv-04301 NC, 2016 WL 362229, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 29, 2016) (citation omitted) (noting compliance with Rule 9(b) is required where UCL, FAL, and CLRA claims all “contain an element of fraud”). This means Plaintiff “must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); Kearns, 567 F.3d at 1124. And “[a]verments of fraud must be accompanied by ‘the who, what, when, where, and how’ of the misconduct charged.” Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1106 (9th Cir. 2003) (citation omitted). In addition, plaintiffs must specifically describe “what is false or misleading”

1 and “why.” Williams, 449 F. Supp. 3d at 901 (citation omitted).

2 Here, Plaintiff has failed to specify the particulars of her orders, what misrepresentations
3 she relied upon in placing them, and Defendants’ specific intent to defraud. Plaintiff does not even
4 specifically allege when she allegedly placed an order on the Applebee’s website, instead vaguely
5 stating “most recently in December 2023.” Compl., ¶ 11. The Complaint further lumps both Dine
6 Brands and Applebee’s Restaurants, LLC, together, but fails to specify what either of the 7 Defendants supposedly did that was fraudulent, much less with particularity and with assertions of 8 fact. Plaintiff therefore fails to “inform each defendant separately of the allegations surrounding his 9 alleged participation in the fraud.” Swartz v. KPMG LLP, 476 F.3d 756, 765 (9th Cir. 2007)
10 (citation and quotation omitted). Each Defendant has the right to know what it is alleged to have 11 done that is fraudulent. The Complaint does not do that.

12 VI. CONCLUSION

13 By choosing to create a Club Applebee’s account, Plaintiff affirmatively agreed to arbitrate
14 this dispute. The webpage she reviewed provided reasonably conspicuous notice of Defendants’
15 Terms, which included the Arbitration Clause, and made clear her creation of an account constituted 16 assent to the Terms. The Arbitration Clause is broad in scope and plainly encompasses this dispute.
17 Further, the Arbitration Clause is valid and enforceable, and not unconscionable, because there was 18 no oppression or surprise in the contracting process and its terms favor Plaintiff. For the foregoing 19 reasons, Defendants respectfully request the Court compel Plaintiff to arbitrate her claims, as she 20 agreed to do, and stay this action pending the completion of arbitration proceedings. In the 21 alternative, this Court should dismiss the case against Defendants in its entirety, with prejudice, for 22 failure to state a claim pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).
